“ David Warren Austin, while conscientious and committed to his business and his clients, was much more than just business. He was a person of strong convictions; he was smart, funny, a good musician, and a very good friend. He was one of my very best friends for almost 55 years, from our earliest college days. He is and always will be loved and missed. Rest In Peace, brother Dave.

“ We are sad to report that David Austin passed away peacefully yesterday at a local nursing facility.

David was a native of New Hampshire and he grew up in Portsmouth, New Hampshire. David was a graduate of the University of New Hampshire and was a lifelong fan of the Red Sox, Celtics, Patriots, and Bruins. In addition to being a fan of the various Boston sports teams, David often returned home in February to attend the annual Beanpot ice hockey tournament with friends as well as the summer to catch a Red Sox game and participate in his church's annual conference.

David was a friend, mentor and colleague of mine for over two decades. David exemplified the fiduciary standard of “doing what's in the clients' best interest” before it was an industry standard.

When 1650 Wealth was founded in 2010,

David partnered with Tom Balcom and was instrumental in helping guide the firm during its early days. David's guidance was critical to ensuring the success of our firm in various ways from helping to select investments to grammar checking the quarterly investment commentary.

While there will not be a funeral service for David, he would want you to hug your friends and family members and enjoy each day to the fullest.

David was a spiritual man and he left a positive impact on many lives including friends, clients, colleagues and acquaintances. I am a better person for being his friend and like many of his friends and clients, I pray he rests in peace.
